SUSTAINABLE STEWARDSHIP

Greening historic buildings

Barbara A. Campagna, FAIA, LEED AP

Graham Gund Architect of the National Trust, Stewardship of Historic Sites, National Trust for Historic Preservation

The National Trust for Historic Preservation's Sustainability Program is demonstrating that conservation and improvement of our existing built resources, including re-use of historic and older buildings, greening the existing building stock, and reinvestment in older and historic communities, is crucial to combating climate change. The construction and operation of buildings accounts for more than 40% of the United State's carbon dioxide emissions. But reusing and retrofitting our existing buildings can reduce these emissions dramatically. In fact, our existing buildings are one of our greatest renewable resources.

Barbara Campagna, the Chief Architect of the National Trust, will discuss the National Trust's Sustainability Program and how the 29 historic sites of the National Trust are integrating historic preservation values with green building practices – from green housekeeping techniques to sustainability master plans to LEED certification for historic rehabilitations.
